SUMMER SAVING

With triple-digit temperatures around the valley, many customers question why their summer bills are so high. The first step to controlling those energy costs is knowing which household items consume the most energy!

The charts to the right display estimated costs for an average household. Many appliances use more energy than consumers expect.

Become more familiar with your energy usage by checking out an ED3 Kill-A-Watt™ meter. You can borrow a Kill-A-Watt™ meter for free by visiting the ED3 Customer Service Center. A Kill-A-Watt™ meter will tell you how much energy your household appliances and electronics use by plugging them into the meter.

Appliances that utilize a small amount of electricity even when turned off are called phantom or ghost loads. Americans typically waste approximately a one month's electricity bill each year on these phantom loads. Phantom loads, also called standby power, can be avoided by unplugging appliances, using power strips and using the switch on the power strip to cut all power to the appliance, or using smart energy strips.
